Today is No Homework Day. Homework is part of every kid’s life, but research suggests that homework is not beneficial to kids below the high school grade level. Too much homework even reduces student achievement.

The Games People Play
Golf is commonly played on private courses, but a variation known as urban golf has moved the pastime from the golf course and into the city streets. Legend has it that the first urban golf game was played outside the White Hart Inn in 1741 by Duncan Thomas in Edinburgh, Scotland. Modern iterations of the game are played not with golf balls, which could cause injury, but with softer tennis balls or squash balls. The game is seen as a social commentary on elitism, an everyman’s version of a game that is played by the well-to-do. Urban golfers tee off in the middle of a city and attempt to hit a target such as a lamppost or street sign with their ball.

Picture of the Day
Let’s give this kid some credit where credit is due. You know what, make that some extra credit.

Now it’s your turn to come up with a good caption.
